1st Place your keep token in a corner clearing of your choice. (Tokens do not fill slots in clearings.)

2nd Place 1 warrior in each clearing, except the corner clearing diagonally opposite from the keep. (Place 11 warriors in total.)

3rd Place 1 sawmill, workshop, and recruiter among the clearing with the keep token and any adjacent ones. (Place 3 in total. Buildings fill slots in clearings.)

4th Flip your board and fill your Buildings tracks with sawmills, workshops, and recruiters, except for the leftmost space of each track.

Playing the Marquise

As the Marquise de Cat, you want to turn the Woodland into an industrial and military powerhouse. Each time you place a building on the map, you score points. The more of that building type there is on the map, the more points you score.

To fuel this construction, you must grow and protect an interconnected economy of wood. Building up infrastructure makes your turns more efficient and helps you draw more cards, so strike out to secure your right to expansion. Your military is legion, letting you enforce your rule with an iron fist, if necessary.

The seat of your power is the Keep of Marquise de Cat, a structure so imposing that no other faction can place pieces in its clearing. Even more, your Field Hospitals will help keep you in the fight. Whenever any of your warriors are removed, you can spend a card matching the warriors' clearing to place them back at your keep—as long as it stands. Protect it well!

Setup (B)

- Place 6 warriors and 1 roost in the corner clearing diagonally opposite from the clearing with the keep.
- If the Marquise is not playing, place these pieces in a corner clearing of your choice.
- Choose a leader, and keep the rest nearby.
- Flip your board and* place your chosen leader on your 3rd Leader Card slot. Tuck your 2 Loyal Viziers under the Decree columns listed on your leader. Fill your Roosts track with roosts except for the leftmost space.

Playing the Eyrie

As the Eyrie Dynasties, you wish to restore your once-dignified kind to your former glory by retaking control of the Woodland. Each turn, you score points for your roosts on the map. The more roosts, the more points you score.

However, you are bound by the Decree, a mandate from the Eyrie leader. Each turn, you must add cards to the Decree, and then take an action for each card in it. Each action must happen in the clearing matching its card, so plan wisely. At first this is simple, but as the Decree grows to 10 or 12 cards, you'll find yourself scrambling to complete every action. If you can't complete one, you'll fall into turnmoil, losing you points, replacing your leader, and discarding the Decree.

Above all, remember: the ground creatures tremble and scatter upon your arrival. You are the Lords of the Forest—you rule a clearing even when tied for presence. However, your people feel Disdain for Trade, so you'll often score fewer points for crafting items.

Woodland Alliance

Outrage

When a player removes sympathy or moves any warriors into a sympathetic clearing, that player must add a matching card from their hand to your supporters. If they cannot, they show you their hand, and you draw a card and add it to your supporters.

Playing the Alliance

As the Woodland Alliance, you work to gain the sympathy of the oppressed forest creatures. Each time you place a sympathy token on the map, you score points. The more sympathy tokens on the map, the more points you score.

To gain sympathy, though, you will need supporters—cards placed on your faction board—matching the clearings where you want sympathy. While you can add your own cards to your supporters, you can goad your enemies into doing the same by provoking Outrage: whenever another faction removes sympathy or moves warriors into a sympathetic clearing, they must add one of their own cards to your supporters.

Don't be afraid to set up chokepoints, as you are experts in Guerrilla War: when defending in battle, you use the higher die. Place your sympathy in clearings where conflict is likely, and force your opponent to face you!

Supporters can also be put toward violent revolt, which destroys all of your enemies' pieces in a clearing and places warriors and a new base there. Bases not only increase your card draw, but also let you train officers, which give you free actions each turn. Protect your bases well! If you lose a base, you'll lose many supporters and officers too.

Setup (C)

Flip your board and draw 3 cards and add them to 1st your supporters. Place your bases on their matching spaces in the Bases box. Fill your Sympathy track with your sympathy tokens.

Setup (G)

1st Place 4 warriors among any clearings along the river.

Flip your board and place 3 warriors in your Payments box. Place your service markers on your Services tracks, setting your starting price for each service. Place your trade posts on your matching Trade Posts tracks.

Playing the Riverfolk Company

As the Riverfolk Company, you ply the rivers winding through the great Woodland, offering your services to any faction who can pay. You score victory points by establishing trade posts throughout the clearings. The more trade posts in clearings of the same suit, the more points you score.

Though the construction of trade posts is a viable way to score points, so too is the raw accumulation of wealth. Each Birdsong, you score points depending on how many funds you’ve saved up and earned over the last round. However, you’ll also need to commit and spend your funds to expand and guard your trade network, striking a balance between dividends and growth.

You’ll earn funds as other factions buy your services, whether the use of your riverboats or mercenary warriors, or even one of the cards in your public hand, which is all For Sale. You can set the prices of your services each turn, so try to predict which services the other factions will need.

Building trade posts helps you expand your clientele and sell more services, as a faction can buy more services from you as they expand into more clearings where you have trade posts. But be careful, when your trade posts are destroyed they cannot be rebuilt! While you may not rule many clearings, you can always move along river paths since you’re a faction of Swimmers.

Then place 1 warrior in each adjacent clearing.

Flip your board and place your outcast marker, with the Outcast side showing, on any space in the Outcast box. Fill your Gardens tracks with matching gardens, except the leftmost space of the garden you placed.

Playing the Lizard Cult

As the Lizard Cult, you cater to those creatures who have been discarded by the other factions. You score victory points by performing the proper rituals, revealing cards from your hand matching clearings where you have gardens, and discarding cards to complete the rite. The more gardens you have in clearings matching the revealed card, the more points you score.

Your gentler approach means you cannot battle your foes at first; to do so, you must radicalize your followers into acolytes. By doing so, you can perform conspiracies in clearings of the Outcast, the suit discarded the most over the prior round.

Your Hatred of Birds means your bird cards are not wild in your rituals. Your gardens spread the news of your dragon lord, drawing throngs of Pilgrims, so you rule a clearing if you have even a single garden there. Finally, your acolytes always get Revenge on the wicked: whenever one of your warriors is removed while defending, you gain another acolyte.
